

Failed pain clinic wants to be ‘Suboxone’ clinic

By Rhonda Smyth
CV&T News Editor

On November 17, the Irvine City Council denied a request for a privilege license for a man from Mt. Sterling to open a pain clinic on River Drive. Many local residents attended the meeting to let the council know they didn’t want it. Monday the council received a request to open a Suboxone/rehab clinic in the same location. Jerry Burnham, the man who first requested a license to open a pain clinic, was on the agenda for the meeting, but

Nina Dunaway asked to be heard instead, stating she represented him. Dunaway explained that after attending the meeting with a large crowd who spoke against allowing a pain clinic to open in Irvine, they had changed their minds and decided to instead open a treatment clinic where opiate addicts could get a prescription for Suboxone™, a drug used to treat opiate addiction. She explained that there would be doctors and nurses available to patients and the clinic would accept insurance. “Patients would come into the office and receive Suboxone which would be placed under the tongue and a nurse would talk to them about their addiction,” Dunaway said. “If they wanted or need it, we would refer them to a rehab facility.” Mayor Ernest Farmer said he didn’t mean to be rude but a new privilege license application hadn’t been submitted to city hall for approval. “Mr. Burnham has to fill out a new application for a privilege license and we don’t have that,” Farmer said. City Clerk Robin Sewell said that Burnham had picked up an application but hadn’t returned it. Dunaway explained that she didn’t know that a new application had to be submitted and that she was considering opening the business in her name. City Attorney Rodney Davis said that whoever owned the building or leased the building was the one who has to obtain a privilege license to run a business in it. Councilwoman Nelle Williams asked Dunaway about the success of treatment with Suboxone. “How long do they stay on it and how do you get them off of it?” she asked. Dunaway said it usually took about 18 months and patients would be taken off Suboxone in a “step-down” fashion. She said patients would have to return to the clinic frequently to check their progress. At first she said the visits to the clinic would be monthly then she said every two weeks. “How do you know they will come back?” asked Councilwoman Janice Bush. “How many of these clinics are there?” asked Williams.

Dunaway said she only knew of two such clinics close to Irvine and Williams told her that according to some research she had done there were many more. Farmer finally told Dunaway she would have to pick up an application for a privilege license and bring it back and then it would come before the council for a vote. The pain clinic privilege license was denied because the council discovered that he had opened his business prior to approval by the Business was brisk this weekend at Picker’s Paradise on 105 Richmond Road which opened on Friday, Jan. 6. The new antique and vendors mall is located in the former Car Quest building at the “Y” across from Hardees Restaurant. Owned by Connie and Steve Young of Wagersville Road, the business contains over 40 booths. Vendors rent them to display and sell everything from antiques, books, clothing, furniture, tools and collectibles. “All our booths are spoken for.” Connie said. “We now have a waiting list...and that was without advertising.” The parking lot overflowed as a steady stream of customers dropped by all weekend. A grand opening is in the works for a few weeks from now. Picker’s Paradise is open every day from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., except Sundays, when it is open from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. For further information, call 723-3310.

This year is an important election year for the United States. Voters will be asked to either re-elect the current president or choose a new one. There are also some state and local races. COUNCIL: Waste water plant nears completion prior to approval by the council.

In other business, Farmer had some good news for the council.

“The new wastewater treatment plant is nearly finished,” Farmer said.

“Bee (Williams of Irvine Municipal Utilities) wants to have an open house and ribbon cutting in June.”

Farmer also said that the contractors had asked for 180 more days to make up for bad weather, but they were making good progress and should be finished by June.

This is a project that has been in the works for several years. The county and the city will merge their sewer plants into one to serve the Estill County Water District’s sewer customers as well as IMU’s customers in the future.

Davis presented the first reading of a street address ordinance in which all residents will be required to display their assigned house numbers prominently so that emergency personnel can find them when they need to.

“Non-compliance notices will be mailed to the address at which they get their tax bills. The penalty for non-compliance is from $250 to $500 and 90 to 180 days in jail,” Davis said.

The council approved the first reading.

Sewell said she will be mailing notices to property owners who haven’t paid their 2011 taxes.

“There are 158 bills that haven’t been paid,” she said. “I am working on a letter to be sent in February.”

She also told the council she has applied for three grants. One is for trash cans and recycle bins for the park. She said she applied to Lowe’s for a $25,000 grant for playground equipment and she should hear from it this month.

The other grant was for a farmers’ market and recycle bins for the Mushroom Festival.

Sewell presented privilege license requests from Farris Marcum to open a garage in the old Somerset Oil location. Barbara Chaney requested a license to open “Pickett Fences” a craft store, also on River Drive. The council approved the license for both businesses.

Farmer said that this year marks the city’s 200th anniversary and he would like the council to consider ways to commemorate it.

“We can do something along with the Mushroom Festival.

Be thinking about it,” Farmer said.

The council then went into executive session to discuss pending litigation.

Sewell said they returned to open session and no action was taken.

School board meeting postponed

By Rhonda Smyth
CV&T News Editor

A special session of the Estill County Board of Education scheduled for last Thursday was postponed until today, after a board member declared it to be an illegal meeting.

According to Kentucky Revised Statutes, special meetings may be called by the presiding officer or a majority of the members of the public agency. A written notice of the meeting must be delivered personally, transmitted by fax, mailed or if requested in writing, by electronic mail so that it is received by board members 24 hours prior to the meeting.

Members of the press also must be notified 24 hours in advance.

Board member Jon Bicknell told Superintendent Bert Hensley and other members of the board that had arrived for last Thursday’s special session that he only received his notice and agenda packet that day at about 10 a.m.

Another board member, Charlie Bill Muncie, stated he didn’t receive his at all.

Bicknell gathered up his packet, told the board that it was an illegal meeting and left.

The remaining members made up the needed quorum, but Hensley said they should reschedule for Thursday, Jan. 12 at 5 p.m.

County attorney succeeds collecting cold checks

The Cold Check Prosecution Program through the office of Estill County Attorney Rodney Davis, Assistant County Attorney Bradley Fletcher, and Paralegal Specialist Becky Werner, reports a very successful 2011. The program recovered 163 cold checks for a total of $31,678.04 for County merchants. In addition, it also recovered $6,825 in fees paid directly to the merchants for their trouble. That is a total of $38,503.04 in cash returned to Estill County merchants as compensation for stolen merchandise and time through the program.

These numbers reflect the continued dedication and hard work of the county attorney's office to the collection of cold checks. The program had one of its most successful years ever in 2010 and in 2011, the program surpassed expectations by collecting 64 more checks and $9,273.53 more for merchants than it had in 2010.

The advent of new payoff plans available to defendants with no prior record of cold checks has increased the program's collection rate and simultaneously decreased the number of cases that wind up in court. The cold check program would like to remind merchants to carefully consider from whom they take checks.

It is very important that merchants scrupulously collect personal information, such as phone numbers, correct addresses, correct names, driver's license numbers and birth date, on every single check they receive. Merchants should read through the obituaries in the newspaper every week and take note of the names.

Occasionally, a person's check book is stolen after they have passed away – know the names and do not accept those checks. It is also important not to accept third party checks as they are difficult to prosecute. Protect yourself and your business by training your employees to do these things also.

The Cold Check Prosecution Program through Davis' office has many resources and much information regarding cold check prevention and collection. Contact the office for more information at 723-6262.

Langley cited

Robert Parrish Langley, 43, of Martin Lane, was arrested by Estill Deputy Sheriff Karl Rifenbark on Jan. 5 and charged with theft by unlawful taking.

Rifenbark said Ralph Martin reported the theft of a $700 Dell laptop commuter and a window air conditioning unit valued at $500.

The items were pawned at Dan's Discount Jewelry in Richmond for $225. Rifenbark stated that Langley admitted to taking and pawning the items of his own free will.

Langley lived in the same home with Martin at the time of the theft. He pleaded not guilty at his arraignment. Bail was set at $10,000 cash.

Rifenbark said there was also an outstanding warrant on Parrish in Fayette County for receiving stolen property.

Tipton cited

On Dec. 30 Rifenbark cited Robert R. Tipton Jr., 43, at the Tobacco Barn on River Drive for possession of a controlled substance, controlled substance prescription not in proper container and possession of drug paraphernalia.

The citation prepared by the deputy states that he observed Tipton swerving from left to right in traffic on River Drive. It also states that when Rifenbark stopped his vehicle he told the deputy that he was talking on his cell phone.

The deputy then stated he asked Tipton if he had any illegal drugs in his car and asked for permission to search it. Upon searching the car Rifenbark stated on the citation that he found several blue pills that were identified as Xanax and cut straws with powder residue in them. None of the pills were in their proper container. Xanax is a schedule four narcotic.

Tipton was given a court date of Feb. 15 after passing field sobriety tests.

Tipton issued summons

Deputy Rifenbark obtained a summons for Samuel E. Tipton of Millers' Creek Road in Ravenna charging him with hindering prosecution or apprehension for an incident that allegedly occurred on Nov. 27.

Rifenbark states on the summons that in the course of a robbery investigation, he interviewed Tipton regarding the whereabouts of a suspect. It states that Tipton told him that the suspect wasn't in his home. After further investigation Rifenbark discovered that the suspect was in the bedroom of Tipton's home.

Deputy Russell Morris served the summons for a court date of Jan. 18.

Conrad makes arrest

District One Constable Danny Conrad arrested Steven D. Chaney, 39, of Jacqueline Court on Jan. 4 on an Estill Circuit Court warrant charging him with flagrant non-support.

Conrad stated on a citation that he had no knowledge of the case.

The warrant states that Eugenia Chaney stated that as of Jan. 4, Steven Chaney was in arrears on his court ordered child support in the amount of $5,426 on which he hasn't made a payment since June of 2011.

Bail was set at $50,000 and he was released when he signed his own surety bond.

There will be a blood drive at Irvine First Christian Church Saturday, Jan. 14 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

McNay pays tribute to Galbraith, the 'last free man in America'

Death of The Last Free Man in America by Don McNay

I'm mourning the loss, at age 64, of my friend, author and frequent Kentucky political candidate Gatewood Galbraith.

Anyone who wants to be a best-selling author needed to spend time around Gatewood.

He had the knack for understanding his audience that few others had.

My first book fair event ever was the 2006 Kentucky Book Fair. When I walked into the arena, I found they had me sharing a table with Gatewood, who was promoting his excellent autobiography, The Last Free Man in America.

I was horrified that I was perched next to a perennial gubernatorial candidate who advocated the legalization of marijuana and known to take a toke or two on his own.

Being with him turned out to be the best thing that ever happened in my book career.

The day launched an unusual friendship.

I had poked fun at Galbraith in the book I was selling, The Unbridled World of Ernie Fletcher. I confessed my sin to Gatewood who laughed and said, "Donnie, it's not the first time someone has poked fun at me."

Being perched next to Gatewood for eight hours was like getting a PHD in book marketing.

Gatewood took me under his wing. He had been to hundreds of book events and passed along his wisdom.

Wisdom that I never forgot.

He talked with me about how to dress. He said to always wear

Gatewood Galbraith

Rockport's shoes with hard soles and heavy socks. It made it easier to stand in place all day. If you see me at a book event, you will note that I follow Gatewood's advice to this day. Rather than sitting behind the table, Gatewood convinced me that I needed to stand on my feet the entire time, be outgoing and friendly, and look every potential customer in the eye.

He suggested wearing a big hat, like he did, to draw attention. I don't like hats but decided that a conservative business suit was more up my alley and would draw attention in a crowded book fair.

Whatever we were doing worked. At the end of the day, we were two of the biggest selling authors at the book fair. He sold more than me but I think he sold more than anyone.

The next year, 2007, when my Son of a Son of a Gambler book came out, Gatewood, Kentucky State Treasurer (and current Huffington Post contributor) Jonathan Miller and I teamed up for a three person, statewide, Kentucky book tour.

We traveled from Prestonsburg to Paducah and signed books at numerous political rallies.

We had fun and it was fascinating to be with Gatewood on a daily basis. He also connected with people from every part of society. Working people were his natural base but he could hang with the high and mighty. Everyone loved him.

Everyone knew him too. I owned a political consulting company in the early 1990's and we did polling for local and statewide candidates. Gatewood was running for something and had 100% name recognition in Lexington, Kentucky. George Bush, the president, had 99 percent and the sitting Governor, Wallace Wilkinson, was at 98 percent.

The key to his personality was that he never took himself too seriously. Issues were serious but Gatewood was not.

That's not to say he wasn't practical. I was in the car behind him at a broken stop light in Somerset. I sat for twenty minutes, waiting for him to make his turn. Finally, I drove around him and he followed me into a parking lot.

I yelled over, "the last free man in America would have run that red light." Gatewood responded, "The last free man in America did not want to give the police a chance to search the back of my car."

Galbreath was ignored or laughed off by better funded candidates and usually by the mainstream media.

Being with him on a regular basis, I realized how many great ideas he had. Gatewood had a strong populist message that was blown off by those who stereotyped him, "the pro pot candi-

He had many views held by both Occupy Wall Street and the tea party, long before either movement came along. His brand of populism might have caught on if he had been a slicker, better funded, campaigner. He chose to remain true to himself and his core values.

Gatewood ran his last campaign in 2011, as an independent, running for Kentucky's Governor. He got about nine percent of the vote. His views on issues like outlawing Mountaintop Coal Removal differed from the Republican and Democratic standard bearers and kept the issue in the forefront of the media.

He impacted the political agenda, even when that wasn't his intent.

I was recently putting together a list of people to invite to my wedding and Gatewood was on A list. When my fiancé asked about him, I said, "you can't have a party unless Gatewood's there."

I'm sure Gatewood has a party rocking in heaven right now. I hope that his legacy of pushing ideas and issues deemed "too controversial" will live on.

History will prove that he was a man ahead of his time. And a great guy to spend time with.

It's hard to ask for a better life than that.

U.S. Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell made the following statement on Wednesday regarding the passing of Gatewood Galbraith:

"I am saddened to hear of the passing of Gatewood Galbraith. He was a truly memorable character who loved our state and its people. Elaine and I send our condolences to his

200 bills filed in state legislature

Ted Edmonds

State Representative

The convening of the 2012 regular session of the Kentucky General Assembly last week marked the beginning of my work in Frankfort this year. More than 200 bills have already been filed, and we'll likely consider more than 1,000 proposals before the end of the 60 day session in mid-April.

One of the first items we'll take up is redistricting. We look at district lines every 10 years and make needed adjustments for population changes identified by the most recent census. While all legislators are deeply concerned with how districts are drawn, you can rest assured that meeting the needs of our constituents is our main concern. Our goal will always be to make sure this and every district is balanced and reasonable. We hope to accomplish this quickly prior to the filing deadline

The biggest priority in this session will be determining the state's new biennial budget. The past couple of budgets have been difficult to write, but this may prove to be the toughest one we've had in a long time. Even though recent revenues are slightly higher than expected, we're dealing with increased cost and the loss of federal stimulus dollars. Some budget analysts say we're facing a $337 million deficit. Given our past cuts, those dollars will be hard to account for.

We'll also consider many other issues of concern to all of you, including education, Medicaid, and substance abuse. In every bill I vote on, I keep your needs and desires in mind. I don't take the responsibility and privilege of being your representative in Frankfort lightly. I hope you follow the work in Frankfort, and let me know what you'd like to see happen. There are many ways to stay informed and in touch.

Rhonda's Remarks

Gatewood Galbraith sold me encyclopedias in 1969

I met Gatewood Galbraith in 1969 shortly before my daughter was born.

He was "working his way through college" by selling encyclopedias door to door.

If he had been any other salesperson I probably would not have remembered him. But his name, his size and his completely charming ways, not only cause me to remember him, but also caused me to buy two sets of encyclopedias, a set of children's story books for my unborn child and a shelf to hold all of them.

He was quite a salesman. Little did I know that many, many years later he would be a famous author and would run for governor of Kentucky.

I would never have voted for him, no matter how much I liked him,

Rhonda Smyth

because of his love of marijuana and desire to see it legalized.

Everybody that knows me, knows that I am dead set against marijuana, as I am all illegal drugs.

People get tired of me telling them that marijuana is a gateway drug...it leads to hard drugs. And if it doesn't cause the user to experiment with harder drugs, it dulls their senses and kills brain cells.

Nevertheless, Gatewood was a memorable character. After all, I remembered him for more than 40 years and I can't say that about a lot of people I met in 1969.

I won't get into the controversy that is brewing in Harrodsburg at this time. I just want to encourage everybody not to jump to conclusions that what that teacher and her aide did to calm an autistic child was cruel or wrong.

Look for the truth before you sign a petition to remove them from their jobs.

In all the interviews, not once have I heard the teacher's side of the story.

I think it's important to hear all sides of a story before "rushing to judgement."

That's all I have to say about that...for now.

Food Court could be finished soon; will be employing about 80 people.
The Irvine Food Court should open at the end of the month, if the weather's kind, say developers. The building is almost ready with some construction continuing inside, and some food vendors have moved equipment in, said John Muth, local manager. "We're getting pretty anxious at this point," Muth said. The Food Court began last year when ARC Inc. announced construction would begin on a lot owned by Bunt Gross on Richmond Road. Modeled after Food Courts ARC has in Stanton and Salyersville, Irvine's store will house Taco Bell, Long John Silvers, Burger King and Columbia Steak Express. The court will employ about 80 people total, each working for a specific restaurant and some working for the court, Muth said. About 130 people can be seated.

The concept of different restaurants in one building has taken some time to develop, Muth said.

HENRY & HOMER DVD’S AVAILABLE

by Preacher Bill Holeman

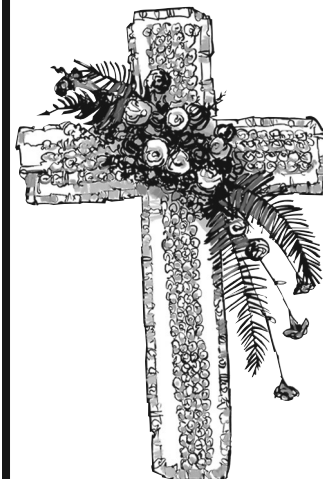

Henry and Homer recently “helped” me produce a DVD, lasting one hour and forty minutes. Do you want something which to remember these guys? Maybe give a copy as a keepsake to your children and/or grandchildren? In their timeless fashion, Henry and Homer share their jokes, Bible stories, etc. in a humorous way. This DVD includes interviews with kinfold sharing their experiences as part of Preacher Bill’s family. Susan (daughter) and Veronica (granddaughter) both work at Manchester Memorial Hospital, which graciously produced this DVD. All proceeds ($15 each) go to Youth Haven Bible Camp and its ministries, as did my life story, The Dummy in the Middle ($10 each). You may order either or both by calling Preacher Bill Holeman (606-464-2727) or Youth Haven Bible Camp (606-464-2445). You may also write Youth Haven Bible Camp at P.O. Box 588, Beattyville, KY 41311. Shipping and handling is $3 per item, multiple orders will bring the S&H price down.

Estill County FFA participates in Bluegrass Region Land Judging contest

The Estill County FFA Land Judging Team participated in the very competitive Bluegrass Region Land Judging contest in the fall, held in Franklin County. The team placed second in the competition, beating longtime rival Madison Central, to earn an opportunity to compete in the State Contest in Hardinsburg. This marks the first time the local FFA chapter has ever had a team enter the state land judging competition. Following the contest, the team visited the State Capitol area and went to the Vietnam War Memorial, a unique sundial honoring each of the fallen soldiers from our state.

Land judging requires students to analyze soil and land characteristics of various sites to determine the capability for use. Team members calculate slope, read the soil profile and consider environmental factors of the site for evaluation, as well as make recommendations for use and management of the land area.

Estill County FFA members attended the North American International Livestock Expo (NAILE) and Rodeo in Louisville.

The event serves as both an educational opportunity and a reward for participation in chapter events throughout the summer and fall semester. The NAILE is the world's largest all-breed, purebred livestock exposition. Ten different species of livestock compete in the exposition, and the purebred beef and sheep events are the largest in the world. Accompanying the event, the North American Championship Rodeo features the Great Lakes Circuit finals for the Pro Rodeo Cowboys Association (PRCA).

CV&T photo by Lisa Baber Gary "Muskie Man" Holton of Irvine caught this 42 inch muskie in the Kentucky River on Jan. 6. He thought it weighed about 25 pounds. He said this is the first one he has caught this year and that it was beautiful weather for fishing. He wouldn't reveal the exact location on the river at which he caught it.

Estill school professionals present at the Exceptional Children's Conference

Deana Caldwell, school psychologist, Marilyn Rogers, speech pathologist, and Karen Tucker, occupational therapist presented at the state-wide Exceptional Children's Conference on Nov. 22, 2011.

Caldwell, Rogers, and Tucker stated that they were glad to be provided the opportunity to present at the conference and share some collaborative ideas for children. Their team work and presentation shared behavior, communication, sensory, and visual supports that may be utilized with children that have special needs. They stated that although the focus was on children that have special needs, many of the positive strategies could be used with all children.

Caldwell, Rogers, and Tucker further stated that they were glad to not only represent the importance of teamwork and how it can benefit children but the Estill County School system's vision, in helping "Every Child Succeed."

That's how many Kentuckians, on average, read each copy of a newspaper.

You see, one reads it, then passes it on. Then another reads it and passes it on. And so forth.

So if you're trying to reach Kentuckians, advertise in the newspaper.

Pass it on.

ENCOURAGING WORD: When HUMILITY AND GRATITUDE MEET

Howard Coop
Guest Columnist

On a recent occasion, I met that friend, and we had an opportunity to engage in a delightful and extended conversation. During that pleasant experience with that special friend, I remembered all of the wonderful acts of kindnesses and helpfulness and took the opportunity to express my deepest gratitude to my friend for all of those wonderful and helpful acts of kindness with which our lives had been so richly blessed. With a shrug of the shoulders

To be kind and helpful to Kathryn and I, a good friend, over an extended period of time, has done numerous kind and helpful things for us. It could be said, and quite accurately, that our friend had gone far beyond the normal demands of duty to be kind and helpful to us. And every kind and helpful act of that dear friend was, and is, remembered and deeply appreciated.

and an expression that, to me, indicated genuine humility, my friend passed it off by saying, “Oh, it was nothing.”

After searching for appropriate words to reply to my friend, I said, “And what may have been nothing to you sure was something to us. You blessed our lives, and we will never forget the multitude of wonderful acts of kindness and helpfulness that you have done for us.”

That, I assume, is a normal reaction, for perspective means much in any, and every, situation, and the circumstance faced gives each individual a different perspective; therefore little to one person can, and often does, become much to another person. Under almost every circumstance, the sincere purveyor of good deeds and kind acts will always and with a deep sense of humility views those good deeds from one perspective, while the recipient, truly grateful for them, will always views them from an entirely different perspective. So, when humility and gratitude meet, that which is nothing to one person will, indeed, be something of great value to another person.

Engineers went 1-1 last week

By Austin Lay
CV&T Sports Writer

The Estill County Engineers played two games in the past week; the first was against district rival Lee County. The Engineers cruised to a victory 54-45. However in the second game the Engineers struggled and fell to Somerset, 56-52.

Against Lee County the Engineers were lead in points by 17; Trevor Jones and Colby Baber were second with 11. The Engineers had no problem with the Bobcats and maintained a steady lead from the very beginning.

Against Somerset, Brandon Morris lead the way again with 7 points. This game was close throughout, both teams passed the lead back and forth all game long. The Engineers were down by 5 with one minute remaining in the game. Somerset had the ball and the full court pressure by Estill caused two back to back turnovers, both of which resulted in baskets for the Engineers. After a time-out by Somerset, the Engineers were set in the full court press and nearly caused a turnover but the ball was last touched by an Estill player. Somerset inbounded the ball and Estill fouled quick sending Somerset to the line. They hit both free throws, giving them a 4 point lead with 5 seconds left in the game. Neither team would score again.

The Engineers will play Model on Jan. 16 at 7:30 p.m. Be sure to come support your Engineers!

LIFESTYLE

Still playing the waiting game...

Hello! I hope the New Year is being good to everyone and that you're sticking to all those resolutions. The weather is certainly being kind to us with its unseasonable warmth.

I thought I'd better write an update column about our little Clay, as several people have asked about him.

Clay's been doing well. He is wide-eyed and alert for hours at a time now, and he's got the cutest grin. Sometimes he's all smiles but other times he'll stare intently at a person or object like he's trying hard to figure them out. He's usually a pretty happy camper unless he needs a diaper or trach change.

Clay has actually been well enough to come home for a while now, but there is a lot of red tape involved in bringing home a baby on a ventilator. The insurance company had to approve the home vent before it could be ordered, and they needed to do a home inspection first. Some of the process was slowed by the holiday break when many folks were off work.

Lots of coordination is happening to arrange follow-up care by respiratory specialists, physical therapy, speech therapy (to treat oral aversion), and basic home health care.

We will have to learn to be nurses too, as well as mamas and papas and nanas and pappies. Hannah and Eric are already getting lots of practice in the hospital, but they will need plenty of help, and who better to do that than Nana and Pappy?

I'm a bit intimidated by this task, I'll have to admit. We know very well that being responsible for Clay's round-the-clock care is going to be a big change and a challenge. We're so accustomed to the nurses being there to care for him when Hannah and Eric can't do so themselves.

The trache tube has to be suctioned and changed regularly and medicines given through his feeding tube. We have to pay particular attention to Clay's feeding tube, to make sure that he doesn't pull it out and flood his lungs with milk. That's a scary thought.

When the home vent comes in any day now, we'll be trained in how to operate and maintain it.

There have been lots of details to work out at home too, in preparing for Clay's homecoming. A back-up heat source had to be installed, and an extra source of power will be wired in, in case the electricity were to go off.

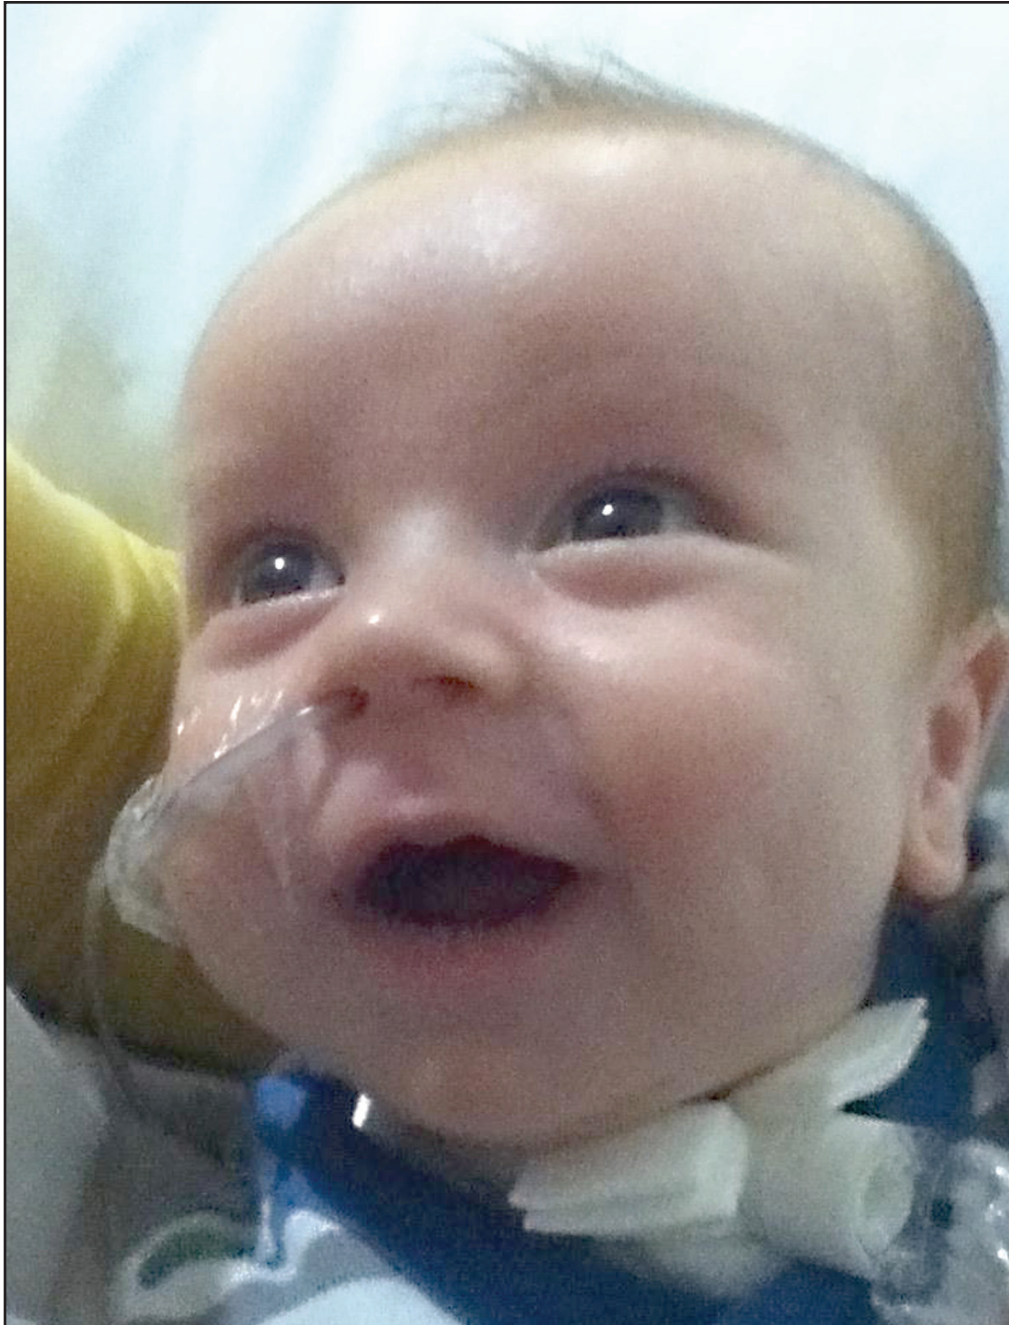

We've been cleaning and sanitizing thoroughly to reduce the risk of Clay catching a bug. Even the car has gotten a good scrubbing.

Babies with CDH are vulnerable to respiratory infections, so quarantine during cold and flu season is recommended by the doctors. Everyone who will be caring for him at home has been cautioned to get a flu shot.

These are challenging times, but exciting times too, as we anticipate bringing the baby home. It will no doubt be a big adjustment for Clay, just being in a different environment. He may actually miss the frequent beeping of the baby monitors that are constantly going off in the NICU.

I'm sure he'll miss all those who've been caring for him these past two months too. I know we will! UK hospital has definitely come to feel like home to us.

I apologize if I've given too many details, but the bottom line is, Clay is doing well, as his parents are preparing to bring him home very soon. Visitors will have to be limited for a while, but the little family can sure use all the thoughts and prayers anyone cares to direct their way.
